PROFESSIONAL FOCUS: I work with AI as a teammate, not just a topic. I use it to analyze data, research markets, and prototype tools, freeing up more time for the questions that matter: what customers actually want, why they convert, and what drives growth. Gender Studies trained me to understand people and culture; Marketing Science at Columbia is sharpening that perspective with data and experimentation. I'm drawn to fast-moving tech teams where I can combine creative thinking, analytical rigor, and AI to test ideas and drive measurable results.

EXPERIENCE

INSTA360 — Summer 2026
Marketing Intern

- Programmed and QA'd 8 bilingual trade-show surveys (SurveyMonkey, Wenjuanxing) across skiing, cycling, mountain biking, and diving; cleaned and weighted ~300 responses in Excel with AI-assisted checks, segmenting buyers vs. prospects to compare brand awareness, usage, and satisfaction against competitors.
- Selected 100 camera-equipped riders for Insta360's first Paris community ride (200+ riders) by scoring sign-ups on riding frequency and story quality; wrote cycling and running workshop decks for 4 cameras with 12 creator demo videos.
- Coordinated China and U.S. teams on a film red-carpet activation, including planning calls with the studio's marketing team; brainstormed the event plan and creator list and kept a running brief from studio and sales email threads.
- Wrote titles and captions and picked images for 3 partner-account posts on Shark Awareness Day (one reached 21.2K likes, ~4× the account's median); did the first-round review of the official video.

DREAME TECHNOLOGY — Summer 2025
Marketing and Public Relations Intern

- Proposed a 5-concept, 4-phase social plan (pre-heat to conversion) for the U.S. Back-to-School campaign, built on a Gen Z dorm-life insight; presented to the U.S. campaign lead and Shenzhen marketing team.
- Sourced 40+ parent and student nano-creators via an AI creator-search tool and Instagram, screening for under 10K followers and high engagement; wrote creator briefs and secured 8 product-seeding partnerships.
- Produced weekly sentiment and share-of-voice reports benchmarking Dreame against 6 competitors (Dyson, Shark, iRobot, Roborock, Tineco, Anker) in Meltwater; refined AI search queries with keyword exclusions to cut irrelevant coverage.
- Built and segmented a 200+ journalist list across tech, lifestyle, and parenting for launch and seasonal pitches; ran PR outreach and logistics for the San Diego flagship launch (100+ attendees, 5+ media/creator partners, 20+ earned-media placements).

SHEIN — Summer 2022
Fashion Trend Analyst Intern

- Researched emerging Gen Z fashion and lifestyle trends, including the Y2K revival, to inform product and marketing direction.
- Turned findings into trend reports and visual decks for creative and marketing teams, supporting campaign concepts and product storytelling.
